Meredith Lackey

Executive Vice President of External Affairs and Nuclear Development | Georgia Power

Meredith Lackey serves as executive vice president of External Affairs and Nuclear Development for Georgia Power. In this role, she leads the company's policies and activities in community and economic development, corporate communication, environmental affairs, governmental and regulatory affairs, region external affairs, land management, pricing and planning and nuclear development. She also serves on the company's management council.

Prior to her current position, Lackey served as senior vice president, general counsel and corporate secretary for Georgia Power. She also served as the company's chief compliance officer. Named to the position in October 2016, she oversaw the company's corporate compliance, risk management, security and legal services functions and provided legal counsel to Georgia Power's leadership team.

Prior to joining Georgia Power, Lackey served as vice president and general counsel as well as chief compliance officer and corporate secretary at Colonial Pipeline Company. In that role, she led the company's legal, compliance, internal audit, government and regulatory affairs, and information technology teams. Prior to joining Colonial, she served as director of human resources for a major U. S. division of an Atlanta-based large international mining company. She began her career as a general commercial litigator at two leading law firms – Jones Day and Baker Botts.

Lackey earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from Louisiana State University and a law degree from the University of Mississippi.
